as we see it

■ It goes without saying that good taste is largely a subjective matter. This society of ours is becoming—depending upon one's own standards—either more permissive, sophisticated, irresponsible or downright debauched.

On the stage there are few words that have not been used, few human acts that have not been shown. In movies, apparently anything goes, whether it be language, nudity or perversion. Our most talented authors turn out books today that once would have been classified as pure pornography.

■ The argument for these new moral standards—or lack of them—is that the audience knows what it is going to see or read and indicates willingness to accept it by paying admission.

What is television to do? What standards should it follow? A scene one family might consider excessively violent might be perfectly acceptable to the family next door. Gamy language, risqué jokes, sexy love scenes and revealing apparel would be accepted by some, perhaps by a majority, as normal language, funny jokes, romantic love scenes and stylish apparel.

■ Lord Hill, chairman of England's BBC, recently pointed out that in its programs the BBC has "an obligation not to despise, or appear to despise, the moral standards of others." He said that if it attempts to shelter behind some general idea of what is acceptable to the public, "we will put on little that is new and stimulating and . . . perhaps little that is worth-while."

If, however, BBC provides total freedom for writers, "we will offend and lose a large part of the audience we want to reach," he said.

■ There's certainly no easy answer for American broadcasters either. They can't attempt to lead the audience in the area of morality, yet they mustn't lag behind the audience. Common sense was never needed more.

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

Country-singer MINNIE PEARL may have her own situation comedy on CBS next year. She'll run a Nashville boardinghouse that swings with Country and Western music . . . MICHAEL PARKS, who played Adam in director JOHN HUSTON's "The Bible," stars in a two-hour NBC-MGM movie, "And Then Came Bronson." PARKS portrays an ex-newspaperman adventurer in the picture, which could become a series if it clicks.

NBC is exploring Bracken's World as a series possibility for 1969. It tells the story of movie-studio employees--an actor, writer, producer, director, secretary and stuntman . . . ABC bought BILL BIXBY's pilot film, The Courtship of Eddie's Father . . . BOB HOPE is rounding up stars for his annual Christmas tour of Vietnam. ANN-MARGRET will be along, as will the GOLDDIGGERS singing group . . . PAUL BRINEGAR, feisty "Wishbone" on Rawhide for seven years, is added to the cast of Lancer.

ONE OBSERVER COMMENTS ON A SIGNIFICANT TREND

By Martin Maloney

Diahann Carroll, in the NBC series Julia, is, I believe, the fourth black actress to star in a series on American TV (Ethel Waters, Hattie McDaniel and Louise Beavers each played the title role in Beulah), and Diahann seems to be the third black performer of either sex to have her own network television series. Nat King Cole and Sammy Davis Jr. preceded her, but if Julia succeeds, she will be the first and only successful member of this last, lonely trio.

As Arnie Toynbee used to say in Western Civilization 101, History Teaches Us that a black star in a TV series—any black star, any TV series—will cause militant bigots to besiege their local stations. This time, I doubt that history is right. Not that American audiences don't include a rich and gaudy array of bigots; it's just that they don't seem to have as much clout as they once did. People like Bill Cosby, late of I Spy, Nichelle Nichols of Star Trek and Greg Morris of Mission: Impossible have established themselves firmly as regular and successful television performers; the next step, inevitably, had to be a series in which a black actor or actress was the star.

The main problem with TV ventures like Julia, as I see it, is answering the question, "But what are TV blacks going to be like?" Some people feel that when, after 20 years of reflecting American culture, TV has gotten around to recognizing the presence of some 22 million blacks in our midst (surely the slowest double-take in history), the images which emerge on the screen should show "typical" people in "true-to-life" situations. This is known technically as the Tell-It-Like-It-Is-Baby syndrome. The Tell-It-Like-It-Is people would presumably come up with a grim and defiant tale in which Miss Carroll would appear as an abandoned wife, trying to raise seven kids in a rat-infested slum on relief.

The producer of Julia, Hal Kanter, an expert at contriving TV comedy, has a different set of stereotypes to offer, derived more from Ozzie and Harriet than from James Baldwin or LeRoi Jones. Julia is a fairly prosperous nurse and a war widow with one child. Kanter says that the series is "a situation comedy with no laugh track."

I hope, as Kanter does, that TV audiences will supply the laughter. It would be pleasant to have Miss C. around for a while—and besides, TV can stand to be much blacker than it ever has been.

There can be no doubt that the blacks are on TV; they've been on the way since 1962 (when the New → York State Division for Human Rights raised the problem with TV executives and producers), though only a few of them have really arrived. Some of the reasons for this sparse showing were made clear last March, when Michael Dann, CBS vice president for programming, testified before the committee. He explained the absence of blacks in television entertainment by pointing out that TV had not been willing to pervert the truth about American life by depicting black governors or business executives, blacks at the 21 Club or in Beverly Hills swimming pools, when in fact there aren't any. CBS writers, he said, try to avoid "artificial situations." This seems a fair and adequate explanation—if you believe that such dramas as Lost in Space and The Beverly Hillbillies and The Wild Wild West derive from the great realistic tradition of Zola, Ibsen and Dreiser.

Behind this sort of instant defensiveness, however, and more or less in private, there have been serious and well-intentioned discussions of the problem by TV executives. The resulting decision seems to have been to admit more blacks to Televisionland, in everything from commercials to Westerns.

The remaining question is: what are they going to look like when they get there? It's a hard question to answer, because, until recently, blacks in TV have been only slightly less rare than aardvarks or unicorns.

A quick canter through the history of programming reveals how nearly invisible they really were. Most of their appearances were as "guests"; a TV set-owner might, over the years, have become reasonably familiar with the look and sound of Louis Armstrong, Sammy Davis Jr., Mahalia Jackson and a few others. Harry Belafonte has done an occasional special. Sidney Poitier appeared years ago in a Philco TV Playhouse drama, Ossie Davis starred in "The Emperor Jones" for Kraft Television Theatre, and Hallmark Hall of Fame produced "Green Pastures."

As for series comedy, there was always Eddie Anderson as Jack Benny's valet, Rochester; there was Beulah (a maid); and of course, there was the immortal Amos 'n' Andy, which gave black performers a little TV work more or less by accident. This enormously popular radio series was written and performed by Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, both white, who somehow conveyed the impression that they had learned about blacks mainly by studying Eddie Cantor's burnt-cork routines. "Amos 'n' Andy" represented its characters as happy, unreliable buffoons. When it came to TV in 1951, the Gosden and Correll roles were played by genuine black actors. The series lasted on CBS and in syndication until 1964, when pressures from civil-rights groups finally forced its withdrawal. As of that date, Amos 'n' Andy was clearly the most vigorous, continuing effort made by television to show what blacks were "really like."

The principal series which might be thought to compete for this distinction were, in fact, no competition at all. A musician named Bob Howard once had a successful series called Sing It Again, but this was in the early days of the medium, long before TV became big business. In 1957, Nat King Cole starred in a network series which failed because no sponsor would support it. In 1966, Sammy Davis Jr., appeared in his own weekly series, an inept offering which faded quickly.

In short, the black American has been the invisible man—or, at least, one of the invisible men—on U.S. television. Consider an episode which happened in Harlem, in 1963. A civil-rights organization offered local children one silver dollar for each black face they could spot on TV (no baseball players included). Over a period of six Saturday afternoons, the organization paid out exactly $15.

The uncomfortable truth may just → be that, except for the long series of marches and demonstrations from Selma and Ol' Miss to Resurrection City, and especially except for the protests, sit-ins and riots, TV might be today as lily-white as it was 10 years ago. The civil-rights and black-power movements provided news of a dramatic voltage which television simply could not—and did not—ignore.

TV drama didn't become integrated in a major way until 1965, when Bill Cosby accepted a co-starring role in the NBC series I Spy. Cosby's success—he received three Emmys—created a new figure in TV drama: what has come to be known as the "black second banana." In its present usage, the term refers to the part which Gabby Hayes used to play in Western movies, i.e., the pal and/or assistant of the hero. Cosby didn't look or sound much like Gabby Hayes; but then, the whole climate of entertainment is much cooler these days. He was followed by a handful of other blacks in subsidiary roles: Hari Rhodes in Daktari, Don Mitchell in Ironside, Greg Morris in Mission: Impossible, Ivan Dixon in Hogan's Heroes.

All this clearly constitutes a trend, which is something TV understands. During the present season, black actors are popping up all over the place. Michael Dann, for instance, seems to have recanted on his earlier stand for uncompromising realism in TV drama.

CBS has introduced a black engineer into the Family Affair and a black marine into Gomer Pyle, USMC.

NBC has Julia, Flip Wilson, and a black physician in The Doctors.

ABC has done very well too. Their fall line-up has included The Mod Squad, with Clarence Williams III, and The Outcasts, co-starring Otis Young. Peyton Place—ever an avant-garde effort—will present an actual "friendship" between a white girl and the son of a newly arrived black family.

Meanwhile, the long, unsettled spring and summer of 1968 produced a plethora of documentaries and specials about and for blacks: a rerun of NBC's "Same Blood, Same Mud," the CBS series Of Black America, ABC's Time for Americans, and the NET Black Journal were outstanding examples. Possibly in an effort to ease a potentially dangerous season, the networks, with some help from local stations, created an odd programming effect. Almost the only original, first-run programs last summer were of the "black special" variety.

In current ghetto slang, the word "gray" refers to a white who is more or less tolerable to blacks. The above rundown of recent and current programming might suggest that network TV is going to be pretty gray this year.

Frankly, I have my doubts. Characterizing TV blacks will not be easy. The alternatives seem to be three in number: you can resort to the old, happy-in-blackface stereotypes, and revive Amos 'n' Andy; you can cast blacks in essentially white roles and white stories, playing marginally with the fact that they have problems which are not shared by most whites; or you can abandon the ready-made characters and familiar stories, and try to develop quite novel and original ones, though not necessarily in the Tell-It-Like-It-Is style.

The first alternative is unthinkable in 1968, and probably won't be adopted except through a colossal blunder. The third calls for a sort of originality and creativity which is rare in any mass medium, and which, if found, would probably prove more embarrassing than valuable to TV programmers. This leaves us with the second alternative—the one toward which TV writers and producers have already gravitated.

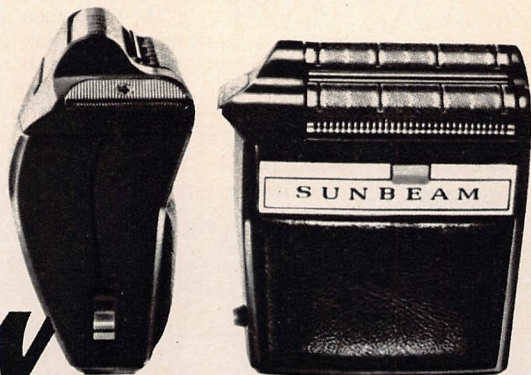

Whether whites or blacks will be prepared to tolerate the black-in-white-face sort of character and story, in a day of White Citizens' Councils and Black Power militants, is hard to predict. The hypnotic power of familiar TV images is great. But so is the white-black division in U.S. audiences. END

Herb Alpert is an astonishing success. He has one of the highest-paid musical acts in the States (the world?), doesn't have to wear neckties if he doesn't want to and gets to wear love beads to work. He's his own boss. Some time back, nobody knew who Herb Alpert was. Then came "The Lonely Bull," a particularly hot single, and then followed a whole bunch of hit records, and numerous TV appearances. Alpert and his partner, Jerry Moss, had been producing their A&M records in a converted garage in West Los Angeles; but after gaining real success, they bought the ex-Charlie Chaplin studios in Hollywood from CBS for a reported $1,000,000. The place (seen partially below) is an enormous hunk of real estate which Chaplin used as both home and studio. It remains as it then was, with the addition of an IBM room (used as a center for bookkeeping and record inventory). Alpert's office (at right) reflects his musicianly ways, being equipped with a → piano, a stereo set, a tape deck, music and numerous gold records. Filled with antiques, it can best be described as classy clutter. A typical adornment of the studio and environs is the Tijuana Taxi (bottom right, page 13), a doddering old frump of a car with nothing (including brakes) to say for itself except the new paint job. In it are the members of the Tijuana Brass, with Mr. Alpert at the tiller. Equal in luxurious mess to Alpert's office is Jerry Moss's office (above left), and it's equal with good reason. Moss is the "M" of A&M Productions and the promoter of the two-man partnership. The mariachis above, adorning the super-sterile A&M computer room, make up another Alpert-Moss enterprise: the Baja Marimba Band. Other members of the stable of artists pose at left with Alpert leading the line. Some of them are: Sergio Mendes (far left), Julius Wechter (fifth from left)—the leader of the Baja Marimba Band; Burt Bacharach (pianist and composer); Claudine Longet (girl singer and Mrs. Andy Williams); and various members of the Baja Band, Tijuana Brass and the Sandpipers. How do you upstage two kids and a beard?

Kathy Garver hasn't quite figured that out yet, but she's still holding her own in 'Family Affair'

By Dick Hobson

"Poor Kathy, the most soundly upstaged young thing in television! As if two appealing little kids weren't enough, she has Sabby Cabot to contend with. Poor child. It's a wonder she survives."

That's what they whisper about Kathy Garver, the 5-foot tall, 19-year-old actress behind the "16-year-old" Cissy in Family Affair.

Kathy plays it cool. "They say I'm in the worst spot for an ingenue. I don't worry about that. After all, I am the only ingenue on the show and I do get the most fan mail. I don't worry about who's got the close-up or who can I upstage or where the kids are or where's Sabby. This takes too much time. I'd rather spend it on my part."

She doesn't have much to do. "On days when I come in and I have only one or two scenes, I blow my mind because I'm bored sitting no matter where I am. I like to be doing things every minute."

Actually, Kathy—if we are to believe her producer, Ed Hartmann—is the only one required to act, since she plays a girl several years younger than herself. The other two children, Anissa Jones and Johnnie Whitaker, merely play themselves, and as for Sebastian Cabot, he's been doing this sort of cuddly-uncle part so long he can play it in his sleep.

Kathy seems almost totally oblivious to these hazards. She has enjoyed such activities as leading cheers at UCLA, where she's a senior now, majoring in "speech." "I like to yell and scream." She has been social chairman of her sorority. "I worked for a rules change. You see, Justice and Truth are my biggest things and some of their rules I didn't think right, like going to bed at 11 o'clock with all the lights out."

She's national teen chairman for the March of Dimes, traveling throughout the country speaking to some 150,000 teens. She's honorary chairman of the State Youth Conference for the Mentally Retarded. Until recently she wrote a monthly fan magazine column called "Kathy's Korner," for teenagers. Sample advice on baby sitting: "If you are absolutely starving and the people have left nothing for you, be strong. Don't raid the refrigerator."

Still, Kathy has not been entirely happy. "I love the show, but I went to the producers and said I'm going to quit this thing and go to graduate school and be a lawyer and they said the only trouble with me is I'm bored and I ought to start getting on the ball and find something to look forward to, so I figured they were right and so I rearranged my bedroom and took the legs off the corner table and changed the twin beds around and now I'm rearranging my mind."

Kathy's refurbished mind looks something like this: "My new goal is to just be always working for something and be always on top of everything and just be aware of everything that's going on and see what I can do to help, and not just sit back and give lip service but actually go out and do something about it that will make the conservative people realize there's a problem and there needs to be something done." Breath. "I think there should be brotherhood and a little humanity going on in the world."

Kathleen Garver, daughter of an architect, the youngest of four children, started studying ballet, tap dancing and acrobatics at the age of 3. "I was real good at splits." A talent agent signed her to do TV commercials when she was 8. From then on she has appeared on programs and series all over the tube. "The way I look, people always want to cuddle me. I've always looked several years younger than my age and I seem to be getting younger looking all the time. I probably have the morals and ideals of the girl-next-door. I look young and innocent, but mentally and socially I don't consider myself that way. I like to have a good time, have fun. I'm not at all domestic, though I do have a sewing machine in my room, and I can always rearrange my furniture."

In boys, she likes the "thin muscular type." Just like her brother Lance, in fact, who is 27 and a would-be actor himself. "He's a real nice brother. He's my type. We wrestle a lot." Sometimes Kathy goes out on double dates with Lance, who always keeps a watchful eye on his sister's escort, one of whom worriedly confided, "Did you see the way your brother looked at me?" When not double-dating, Lance has a habit of commenting, "You going out with that creep again?"

One of Kathy's recent dates was a dentist. "He no sooner picked me up than he had to call his telephone exchange and there was somebody with a toothache so we went to his office and I played his dental assistant. I had a little plastic thing and I put a bib around the patient and I got him some water and it was really fun. I like to be needed."

She doesn't take her dentists to Hollywood-type parties, though. "I'd rather go with somebody in the business, an actor or something. If I invite a student or something, they don't understand. They're just looking at all the people. They are uncomfortable. It's like you have to entertain them. 'This is so-and-so.' 'This is my world.' It's too hectic, the flash bulbs and so forth. I'd rather go with an actor like Stephen Young or Clint Ritchie."

Kathy has occasioned a new wrinkle in fan mail—cash. "Teen-age boys are always sending it to me. They think I'm only 15 or 16. You should see the five-dollar bills I get for my birthday and the five-dollar bills I get for Christmas. It's probably their allowance, poor things."

What the kids don't know—till now—is Kathy's passion for good works. Five dollars makes a neat contribution to the March of Dimes.

An Edwardian In Malibu

The ultra-British Patrick Macnee prefers California's beaches to London's drawing rooms

It is difficult to imagine Patrick Macnee—the staid, stylish, slightly stuffy John Steed of ABC's The Avengers—as a tanned West Coast beach bum.

But someone who knew him a decade ago remembers him as "part of the British colony, beach-bum division, Malibu section."

That was a long time ago—back in the late Fifties, when Macnee made an unsuccessful hegira to Hollywood, where, plump and nearing 40, he found himself living in a $75-a-month pad and facing a future playing character roles, rather than being a sexy leading man like his ageless cousin, David Niven.

Of course, it is all different now. At 46, Macnee—despite Steed's staidness and stuffiness—is a sexy leading man in one of the hippest, most "in" series on the air. Far from the sands of Malibu, he may be found in his London flat sipping champagne amidst surroundings that would do John Steed proud. He says, "I'm the only person under 80 who lives in this building. My neighbors are Agatha Christie and Dame Sybil Thorndike." The flat is small—living room, kitchen, bedroom and bath—and crowded with the sort of furnishings Steed would like. A hi-fi, which plays unobtrusively, is concealed in an antique coach box on the floor, and a chair looks as if it might have belonged to the Borgias. The color television set, which he has had only a few months, is a jarring note in the digs of a man who might indeed be—as Macnee has been described—"an unabashed romantic who would have enjoyed life as a Regency buck in the reign of George IV."

But a touch of Malibu is there, too. Along with the Edwardian suit, self-designed, and the flowing collar and tie, Macnee is wearing hippie beads—a gift from his wife, actress Kate Woodville, whom he visited last spring at Malibu. While there, he shucked his Steedian clothes for the slacks, T-shirt and bare feet of the beach.

Macnee intends to go back to Malibu for good when his contract with The Avengers expires next year. In London, at dinner in an American-style restaurant in an American-style hotel, over American-style rare roast beef, he said, "I am at heart a Californian. I hope someday Kate and I can have a ranch near Santa Barbara and raise horses. I hate to say this, but there's really nothing in England for me."

Coming from someone as ultra-British as Macnee—not to mention Steed—this sounds like sheer heresy. But, as a matter of fact, it is difficult to sort out the various facets of Macnee vis-a-vis Steed and of Macnee himself. He can, on the one hand, be the very picture of Steed. Lorne Greene, who acted with him in Canadian radio and Shakespearean productions in pre-Bonanza days, says, "He made the part of Steed into his own image. He uses what Pat Macnee is in The Avengers." But his wife says, "He is totally different from Steed—so unlike. He either goes the whole way dressing up, putting on one of his Steed suits, or he goes the other way." Summing up, she says, "He's a mercurial personality, probably because of his background—part sophisticated and part country."

The country part of his background lasted for 17 years, and love of horses comes natural to Patrick Macnee. His father—all 5 feet 3 inches of him—was the redoubtable "Shrimp" Macnee, jockey and trainer of race horses. As a boy, Pat worked horses, milked cows and wanted to be a jockey himself. He did not get to London until he was 17 years old.

Early along, though, the rural, equestrian side of his nature was overcome by the artistic (his grandfather, Sir Daniel Macnee, was a painter and president of the Royal Scottish Academy). At Eton, he began his acting career playing, of all things, Queen Victoria. Later he graduated to Henry V. When he was 17, his parents parted, and he went to London to become an actor for good.

Today he says, "I did my best work before I was 20," and he says it with a British—and Steedian—understatement uncharacteristic of actors. In fact, this attitude of self-denigration may be a reflection of the Macnee-Steed → mystique and more important than resemblances of dress and manner, for although Pat Macnee may seem to have the flamboyance of the typical actor, he is, like Steed, reserved, soft-spoken and modest.

His modesty extends to his wartime career. He readily admits that as commander of a torpedo boat in the North Sea for five years during World War II, he was constantly seasick ("They had to put a bucket by me"), but he speaks reluctantly of the perils he encountered and of the fact that he was the sole survivor of the men with whom he first put to sea.

Returning to acting after the war, he says, "I was in all the repertory companies in the North of England. I've done everything." This broad experience has enabled him to play a variety of parts on the stage, in motion pictures and on television in London, Canada and Hollywood—everything from major Shakespearean roles to a cowboy in a Walt Disney movie. A fellow actor says, "He uses himself so well. I can close my eyes and hear Pat talk and know what he's doing. He does the sort of thing that Rex Harrison used to do but does it on his own terms." To Macnee himself, acting is not the discipline it is to some actors. "It gives you incredible freedom," he says. "With that, you either do a good job or a bad job."

Macnee was married for 15 years to former actress Barbara Douglas. They had two children—Rupert, now 21 and a student at Princeton, and Jennifer, 18, who lives in England but plans, like her father and brother, to come to the United States. Patrick Macnee and Kate Woodville were married in 1965. They met when she appeared briefly in the premiere episode of The Avengers. Her appearance was brief because she was murdered in that episode, and, although few viewers know or remember it now, it is her murder that Steed and his succession of leading ladies have been trying to avenge all these years. Today, with her in Hollywood and him in London, there is considerable trans-oceanic commuting. This does not bother Macnee. Like many performers, he has a leaning toward astrology. He says, "I'm an Aquarius—I love the water." It was an astrologer who advised him to go back to England at the time he—and his career—were languishing on the beach at Malibu. He took the soothsayer's advice, returned to England, got a part in a picture immediately and eventually began his long run in The Avengers.

At first, according to someone who was in at the beginning, the part of Steed was "a dreary one—an ordinary sidekick—but then Pat decided to play it tongue in cheek." Macnee himself has become somewhat disenchanted with the role after all these years. "At the start it was exciting—any newness I love," he says. "But now I'm not really involved, and it's, well, just interesting." Today he is much more concerned with coming to the United States next year, "making millions of dollars in films" and getting that horse ranch near Santa Barbara.

So, someday if you're out by the Pacific and see a man wearing brightly colored casual clothes and hippie beads, you may say what a butcher in London said recently when Macnee came into his shop similarly attired. "Say, you look like that fellow on the telly—the one in The Avengers," said the butcher. Then he added, "But, no, it couldn't be."

Yes, it could. Someone who knows Patrick Macnee says, "He may appear easygoing—even frivolous sometimes—but he is really tough underneath. When he decides to do something, he does it." Thus, last spring, when he saw himself "looking fat as a pig," he decided to lose weight and dieted off two stone—28 pounds. And next spring, although The Avengers may go on, Pat Macnee will probably be back by the Pacific enjoying himself immensely. (END)

Smooth out family relations

There's irritation in every household.

Sore, chapped hands. Rough, dry skin. Even someone doing a burn from shaving.

Our family plan? Just introduce Dermassage to the crowd.

Dermassage treats every body to cool, creamy-white medication. It moisturizes and comforts Mom's sensitive skin. It smooths Sis' legs, elbows, and heels. It calms annoying itches. It cools and soothes Dad's sensitive skin before or after shaving.

Hospitals know all about Dermassage. The majority of them use it for patient skin care.

Bring home a dispenser bottle of Dermassage. And smooth over irritation in the whole family.

Soften often with medicated Dermassage Lotion.
Or try super-moisturizing Dermassage Skin Cream.

Be sure to watch "The Doctors" in color, NBC,
Monday through Friday, 2:30-3:00 PM, NYT.

What to do when the picture is worth a thousand words.

If your picture tube is shot, the only thing words can do is let you blow off steam.

So try to keep cool. And call in a good serviceman.

(There's a whole list on the opposite page. One of them is bound to be near you.)

He'll replace the old tube—no matter what make—with a Sylvania color bright 85.®

We call it Color Bright for the simple reason that it gives you bright colors.

Reds, for instance. Sylvania was first to develop rare-earth phosphors that produce beautiful, bright reds.

And allow us to use brighter blues and greens.

We've got extra-sharp-focus electron guns inside the tube. And a color mask that won't stretch sideways when the tube warms up. So each color dot works harder at its little job. And fights fuzziness in the picture.

Which means that when you replace with a Sylvania color bright 85, your pictures could easily look better than when the set was new.

SYLVANIA
A SUBSIDIARY OF
GENERAL TELEPHONE & ELECTRONICS

Tape the names of your nearest TV servicemen to the back of your set. Then you'll be sure of getting a Sylvania color bright 85" when you need it.

How Great a Role Did TV Play?

The hair-raising closeness of the Nixon-Humphrey race has to leave some doubts for future White House aspirants about the political potency of television. Richard Nixon's campaign was highly geared to TV. Apparently he spent over half of his $18-$20 million campaign kitty on TV shows and spots. To many observers, he raised the political uses of TV to a new art. Yet, Hubert Humphrey, short on money for TV and making generally undistinguished use of the home screen, very nearly denied Nixon the Presidency.

ABC, as usually happens, was the network with far the fewest watchers on Election Night, but those who stuck around into morning-after hours were rewarded with the first network declaration that Nixon had won. Forty-five minutes after an 8:15 A.M. (ET) pronouncement, firmly calling Nixon the new President, ABC wrapped up its election special and resumed regular programming. CBS and NBC, aghast at ABC's audacity, held off giving Nixon the nod for more than two hours.

PBL, the Sunday night experimental series which returns to the air Dec. 1, had a crew at ABC and NBC on Election Night shooting film for a documentary on television news practices. Objective: to try to assess whether television, as often charged lately, is biased in its news coverage.

ABC is plotting a big Second Season play come January. Reason: heavy programming casualties in the fall ratings battle. Altogether, four half-hour series—The Ugliest Girl in Town, The Felony Squad, The Don Rickles Show and Peyton Place II (but not Peyton Place I)—and two hour shows, Journey to the Unknown and Operation: Entertainment, have been felled by the Nielsens and will be withdrawn in midseason. That's Life also is plagued with low-ratingitis, but ABC officials are determined to try to save it as a worthy innovation in original musical comedy.

The replacement shows include a musical hour with British pop singer Tom Jones. Another will be a comedy hour, What's It All About World?, with Dean Jones. Let's Make a Deal, an NBC daytime panel quiz moving over to ABC in December, will have an evening edition. A fourth Second Season entry will be Section 8, laugh-in thing out of the shop that produces the Rowan and Martin hit. Still another new entry will be Generation Gap, a youth-versus-parents panel quiz show, emceed by Dennis Wholey, a Cincinnati personality.

NBC has confirmed the expected: The Beautiful Phyllis Diller Show will be washed out at the end of December. Its ratings weren't beautiful. But the network wasn't prepared to say what will go into the Sunday evening hour. Maybe Soul, the all-black revue recently sneak-previewed. Maybe Strange Report, a London-located whodunit starring Anthony Quayle.

CHEYENNE AUTUMN (CBS), Thursday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

The accent is on the spectacular for the week's network movies, with a double installment of the 184-minute-long "El Cid" taking up two evenings and a single sitting of the 156-minute "Cheyenne Autumn" scheduled for one. To ease things, apparently, the Saturday night movie spot is being pre-empted by a couple of merely hour-long specials by Tennessee Ernie Ford and Jack Benny.

Samuel Bronston's 1961 film biography of Spain's national hero was—and is—a dazzler, a historical jam-crammed with castles and crowds and battles galore and enough jousts and tournaments and armored extras to satisfy the most ardent medievalist among us. Fittingly, Charlton Heston's portrayal of El Cid is of the marble-monument variety, providing a colossus rather than a human as hero of a plot too complicated to really matter. What emerges from the sporadic chronology is a sort of Spanish "Ivanhoe" story, with Sophia Loren as Chimene to add opulence to what is already one of the more opulent spectacles on film. And there's a bang-up finale worth waiting for (or dropping in on), with El Cid's posthumous foray against the Moors.

"Cheyenne Autumn" is a Western spectacular that can stand in the archives as John Ford's Anthology of Western Cliches, the authentic anthology, after all, since the maestro himself originated most of them. It's designed for kiddies of all ages who want to travel that grand old Monument Valley trail with Ford; kiddies of kiddie-age will enjoy the eternal whoop-de-do and cavalry-and-Indians bit, while grown-up kiddies will find delight in spotting Gilbert Roland and Dolores Del Rio among the Cheyennes.

Gluttons for Westerns can also revel in "The Sons of Katie Elder," what with her four boys settin' out in a Texas town to clear Paw's name and honor Maw's memory by sendin' the kid brother to college, like Maw dreamed. Start picturin' big John Wayne as the eldest Elder boy and Dean Martin as the drinkin' gamblin' sibling next in line with Martha Hyer, as their conscience, asking whether "you think your Maw would want you trying to seek revenge this way, with a gun?"—and you can wind up picturin' the picture without watchin'. But it's pleasant and lighthearted.

The remaining offerings, billed as comedies, are more to be sighed over than laughed at. "Caprice" presents Doris Day as a kind of James Bond fighting a plot to smuggle dope via cosmetics. Actually the movie seems to be a plot against Miss Day who is as unflatteringly gowned as she is photographed. Even with wigs, soft lenses and mod costumes, she looks a bit old for the caper—but she is energetic. So's Robert Walker as he struggles through "Ensign Pulver," but nothing can revitalize this alleged sequel to "Mister Roberts." It lacks the mood, wit and wisdom of its predecessor.

A TV dinner, a jug of wine and thou.

Nothing improves the rating of a TV dinner like Guild VINO da Tavola—an extravagantly delicious wine for people like thou—who insist on the best, no matter how little it costs. Luscious bouquet, deep, rich body with just a touch of tartness in the taste; Guild wine is a wine for every day—but certainly no everyday wine. Be a spendthrift. For about a dime a glass thou can join the Guild and turn that TV dinner into a television special. Why just eat when thou can dine?

EL CID

COLOR Splendor and spectacle highlight this 1961 film about Spain's national hero, Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid.

The film, telecast in two parts, concludes tomorrow, same time and channels.

The setting: 11th-century Spain—the battleground of small Christian kingdoms and the warring Moors, who threaten to spread Islam throughout Europe. Into this arena rides Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar, a knight whose virtue and towering courage earn him the title, El Cid, which means "the Lord."

The story follows El Cid from his arrival at the court of Castile, through battles, duels, exile and the siege of Valencia, to his triumph in death, riding into immortality against the Moorish host.

El Cid did less to shape the destiny of Spain than to fire the imagination of its people, and this first movie of his exploits appropriately serves the image if not the facts. History bows to ancient myths, and El Cid is drawn as the hero of legend.

The movie captures sprawling vistas of medieval Spain: castles and armies, duels and pageantry, battles and triumphs. Battles staged by Yakima Canutt ("Khartoum"). Director: Anthony Mann.

There was this girl...

Turn page for story

...her name was Susan Miller;
now it's Susan Saint James;
and here's how it all happened in a few hours

By Leslie Raddatz

Back in what are often referred to as the good old days in Hollywood, a studio would choose a previously unheard-of girl and give her what was known as the Big Build-Up. This included top roles co-starring with established names in pictures, being seen in the right places with the right people, and extensive efforts by the studio's publicity department. Sometimes the charms of the recipient of this attention were less professional or artistic than they were physical or pneumatic. Sometimes she was just the producer's lady friend. Once in a while—like Jean Harlow, Jane Russell or Kim Novak—she made it. Mostly—like Anna Sten, Gail Russell or Vera Hrubá Ralston—she never did.

Right now, the quaint and near-defunct custom of the Big Build-Up is being refurbished by Universal Studios for a 22-year-old actress named Susan Saint James. Susie is pretty, all right, but no more so than hundreds of girls who are, if you will pardon the expression, walking the streets of Hollywood. She is anything but pneumatic, and she frankly admits, "I'm the last of the bustless wonders." She didn't even know any producers. Susan just walked into the casting office cold one day and said she wanted to act. As for previous experience, she had never acted in front of a motion-picture camera before she landed a leading role in the 1966 World Premiere "Fame Is the Name of the Game," with Tony Franciosa.

Yet, today, two years later, she is starring in the NBC series based on that movie-for-TV: The Name of the Game, with Franciosa, Gene Barry and Robert Stack. And Universal is giving her the Big Build-Up.

How, you may well ask, come?

First of all, there was that day, after working as a fashion model in New York and Paris, Susan walked into Universal's casting office and announced, "I've been a model for three years. Now I want to act." The studio's casting chief, a skeptical lady named Monique James, recalls, "She was 25 pounds heavier then and had a lot of hair. But she had warmth and personality, so I asked her what acting experience she had." When Susan admitted this was limited to just six lessons, Miss James sighed and said, "Well, take some more lessons and come back and do a scene for me."

But this was not what Susan had in mind. She said she would be back the next day to do the scene. That is what she did—a scene from "Barefoot in the Park"—and Monique James says, "I couldn't believe it; I just couldn't believe it. I signed her on the spot." She then took her to see producer-writer Randal MacDougall and director Stuart Rosenberg, who were getting ready to do "Fame Is the Name of the Game." Miss James says, "I thought they might do a test on her, so I'd have some film. That was all I had in mind." MacDougall and Rosenberg were so impressed that they asked Susan to leave the office and memorize a scene for them. After she was gone, Miss James said, "This isn't fair—this girl has had only six acting lessons." But five minutes later, Susan came back with the scene memorized, did it, and was immediately cast, without a screen test.

"Fame Is the Name of the Game" was not one of the critical successes of the TV season. Almost to a man the reviewers hated it, but to a man they loved Susan Saint James. Rick Du Brow of United Press International wrote, "Miss Saint James is an original, a potential star of major standing." And the often catty Terrence O'Flaherty of the San Francisco Chronicle said, "The best thing about 'Fame Is the Name of the Game' was Susan Saint James, whose fresh personality and good looks made the role of Franciosa's girl Friday a delightful exception in a parade of people I'd never like to know."

Universal got the message and promptly cast Susan in another World Premiere, "It Takes a Thief," with Robert Wagner. The Big Build-Up was on.

With Susan Saint James, however, it is, as someone close to the show says, "more a family thing than a professional thing—we feel that we have a real groovy daughter." Associate producer Dominic Frontiere says, "I hate actors, but she's got me." One of the show's producers, Leslie Stevens, who never saw Susan until the studio signed her, says, "What I think about her is so extreme, I almost don't want to say it, but she has what Chaplin had. She's the waif, the ragamuffin. She can take you from joy to tears." Monique James agrees: "She can make you laugh hysterically, but she can break your heart." And Tony Franciosa, not noted as one of the easiest persons in the world to get along with, takes her aside on the set to give her kindly lectures on acting.

Little Susan Miller (she changed her name to Saint James when she started modeling at 17) doesn't fit the pattern of the Hollywood starlet, typically the only—and lonely—child of a broken family of modest means who lived in a fantasyland she created for herself by indefatigable movie-going and prodigious reading of movie magazines. Susan Saint James, shy as a child, did find a fantasyland in reading, but it was in books like the romantic travel adventures of the late Richard Halliburton. According to her best friend, Jeanne Battaglia, of Rockford, Ill. (the Miller family moved there from Susan's native Los Angeles when she was 10): "I'd stay at Susie's house for a week, and we'd read and talk about all the places we'd read about." On a recent visit to Hollywood, Jeanne said, "When we went to Disneyland and saw the → Matterhorn there, it didn't mean a thing because we had already seen it when we were in high school."

The Millers are a prosperous family in Rockford, where Mr. Miller is president of a toy company. Recently, when he and his wife were visiting Susan, they drove by a factory building. Mr. Miller said, "There's my old factory!" Susan said, "That's The Factory"—now the most "in" discotheque in Hollywood. Susan has two brothers, one an executive in his father's company and the other a marine flier, and a younger sister, who is taking singing and dancing lessons but says, "All I want to do is get married and have eight kids." Susan herself says, "I'm the world's worst singer. I do take dancing lessons, but I don't dance like the other girls—I dance more like a goose or something." No one in the Miller family had ever been in show business, and Susan says, "I wouldn't be in films if anybody in my family had been. The fun is bringing your friends out and showing them around."

Last year she was married to aspiring writer Richard Neubert, a serious, Yale-educated young man who says things like, "Philosophically, I disagree with Walt Disney." Although they are, at the time of this writing, separated, Susan said of her husband at the time of the marriage:

"He met me when I was this little fat girl. I'll have to stay married to him forever because he's the only one who had faith in me."

Which, of course, isn't true. There are all those people at Universal who are working to give her the Big Build-Up. Two years ago, when Susan's sister Mary came to visit her, she was living in a tiny one-room apartment. "I was expecting the same thing when I came back the next time," says Mary, "but instead her picture was on the commissary wall and everybody was calling her Miss Saint James." END

You read it here first

By Richard Martin

Remember, you saw it here first!

If you had seen Eddie Cantor when he was with Gus Edwards' kiddy revue or Danny Kaye when he was playing the Borscht Belt or Rock Hudson when he was driving a truck, years later you would be telling your grandchildren about it.

That's the way it is—or may be—with young David Barton.

Who is David Barton? That is the point. Right now he is just a 12-year-old boy who has done a little stage work, a little television and a little movie work during his five-year acting career. But it would seem that he is headed for greater things.

Of David, director Jean Renoir has said, "He is a fantastic boy." When he played in "Family Portrait," the Hollywood Reporter said his performance was "excellent," and in a review of "All the Way Home" called him "self-possessed and convincing." Director Ezra Stone—who has also played Henry Aldrich in his time—describes him as "a dedicated boy." One of the Nation's top magazine and newspaper publishers calls him, with Horatio Alger overtones, "a diligent little chap." His drama coach, Harrison Lewis, says, "He's a sharp boy. When you ask him a question you get the sort of answer you'd get from a 25-year-old man." And Antonio Santean, director of "All the Way Home," said, "He's an intellectual."

Whether he's performing or not, David seems to be all of these things. A seventh-grade "A" student and, with an IQ of 158 a member of the Gifted Children of Los Angeles, he plays chess, collects coins and stamps, and reads prodigiously. One summer he read 133 books—fiction, autobiography, anthropology and religions of other lands. He speaks seriously, but with a ready smile, of his goals and the thought he has given them: "There are so many careers. I've thought of being a writer or a doctor, a geneticist particularly—that's about as far out as I could think of. But the acting always gets me."

The acting bug bit him when he was 7 years old and played a nonspeaking role in a Hollywood High School production of Sophocles' "Antigone." His older sister, an actress who calls herself Joette Waters, had a part in the play and got David in, too. Of that first experience he says, "Looking out over the audience, I decided that this might be fun." Since then he has played a variety of roles—the nephew of Jesus in the play "Family Portrait," a clown in "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off," an Indian boy in Pistols 'n' Petticoats, an emotionally disturbed child in the motion picture "Mad Room" (shot at Los Angeles County General Hospital, where he was born David Barton Aguaya), and a whole gaggle of typical American boys in numerous TV commercials.

Whatever the role, David says, "I always meditate on the character. I have to study him and think about him as much as I can. I thought up a whole background for the boy I played in 'The Time of the Cuckoo' so that he was more than just a name in the script." As a result of this, trained actors like to work with him. One of them says, "He looks back at you—it's not like playing to a blank wall."

Obviously, David is not the typical American boy he has played in all those commercials. His mother recalls an incident a few years ago, when she took David to a "cattle call"—a general call from a studio for children of all shapes and sizes for roles in a film. Out of some 500 children who showed up, David was not chosen. At first Mrs. Barton was disappointed, but later she thought, "Why are you upset? He's unique!"

Behind almost every child actor there is, of course, a mother. Mrs. Barton admits, "I've always been an actress," and she will be appearing as a Greek mother in the motion picture "The Beautiful Greek." She insists that she is not the typical stage mother, but David says, "They all say that," and Mrs. Barton calls all the studios in town whenever David is in a play—and keeps calling until someone from the casting office comes to see him. She has supplemented the family's income by taking in foster children, and for a time operating a small flower shop, so that her two daughters and David could receive training to become performers. David's father, a quiet man who is a chef, shrugs his shoulders and says, "I just drive them around." It is Mrs. Barton who really has The Dream. She says, "I couldn't think of anything more beautiful than being a child actor and growing up to be an old character actor."

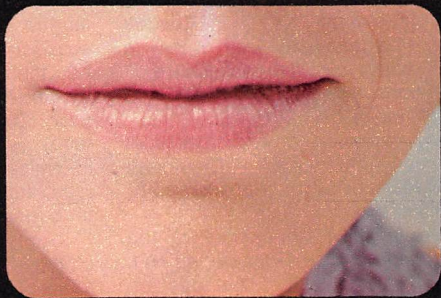

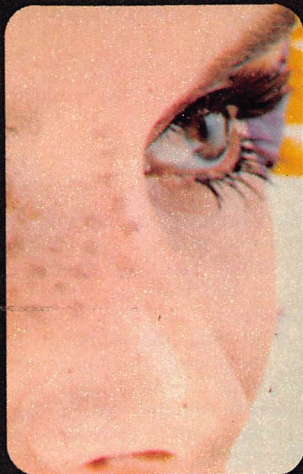

There are probably a few old character actors around who would disagree with that, but if it eventually happens to David Barton, just remember—you read it here first.

PUTTING THE TEETH IN THE TIGER

The Cincinnati Bengals are relying on Paul Brown to provide some opening-season bite

By Melvin Durslag

To start with, it wasn't the intention of Cincinnati to come up with an American Football League franchise. As recently as two years ago the Chamber of Commerce there was announcing to the world that the National Football League belonged irrefutably within the city's golden perimeter.

Cincinnati pointed to its reputation as a sports town, to its hotel accommodations, to its "healthy, solid and diversified industrial climate," and to its proximity to other National League cities. It also revealed that within a 150-mile radius of Cincinnati 36 television stations operated. No rival could claim that many.

"By any yardstick," the Chamber of Commerce contended, "Cincinnati shows a clear-cut advantage over competing cities."

To make a short story succinct, the franchise went to New Orleans, the NFL owners doubtless taking the position that the proximity to Bourbon Street transcended in importance anything Cincinnati could offer.

Thus it occurs today that the city by the Ohio is the proud father of the Cincinnati Bengals, the 10th entrant in the AFL. Having previously described the NFL as the "big league," the town has called for a swift readjustment in thinking.

For what comfort it may be, Cincinnati at least is proceeding with a big-league coach. Of course, up until this season he hadn't worked since 1962, but then Richard Nixon was out even longer. All that remains for Paul Brown, now 60, is to prove that he can win today as he did during a 32-year period in which his teams—high school, college, service and professional—showed an over-all record of 296-75-15.

In his estimation, the game hasn't changed dramatically since he served as field leader of the Cleveland Browns.

He has noted variations in the blocking and in the defensive-line patterns but finds the rest generally the same. Others in the sport, however, hint that Brown, trying to build from nothing, is exposing himself over the next few years to immense sadness. Says a rival American League coach:

"Paul will find that the game is far more complicated than when he left it. He could be eligible for Social Security before he fields a team to play even .500." Undeniable, however, is the fact that his Cincinnati team in its first season held its own during this exhibition period and has exceeded most prognoses in league activity.

Last seen on your television screen, Brown was the dapper gentleman encamped on the Cleveland side line, dispatching plays to the huddle. The "messenger system," it was called. Through the use of shuttling linemen, he masterminded each game, deploying the quarterback as a robot. Brown had become America's most renowned coach.

The owner of Cleveland, Arthur Modell, had bought the club in 1961 for the then staggering price of $3.9 million, specifying that Brown had to come with the deal. He signed Paul to an eight-year contract, making him coach, general manager, vice president and member of the board. By the end of the 1962 season, Brown, incredibly, was fired. People read the announcement in disbelief. The rookie owner had kicked out one of the game's superleaders.

Modell explained that an insurmountable "personality difference" existed, and he had the blessing of some of the players. Jim Brown, for instance, testified, "I feel Modell had good reason to fire Brown. Football players don't like to be treated as inferiors."

The coach kept his dignity, repairing quietly to La Jolla, Cal., where he golfed and relaxed while collecting a reported $80,000 a year from Cleveland. Financially, Brown is comfortable. Why, at his age, would he want to return to the commotion of professional football?

"I found that being financially secure wasn't enough," he says. "I was dying by inches. The San Diego Chargers trained near La Jolla. The first thing I knew, I was watching their practices. Then the New Orleans Saints came to San Diego to train. I started to watch their practices, too. I knew I had to get back into this thing."

Exactly what the Cincinnati ownership is going to have, long-range, in the way of a franchise isn't yet known. Attendancewise, baseball and basketball have done nothing startling in the city, but Ohio has solid credentials as a football state. Cleveland is the National League's most profitable team, and Ohio State University, in Columbus, consistently is one of the Nation's top draws among the amateurs.

The last expansion team of the AFL, Miami, has been anything but a smash. It might be said, in fact, that the ownership in that tropical paradise has lost its Bermuda shorts. But the league generally is gaining in attendance, and its television possibilities are rated good, what with the full merger of the two pro leagues set for 1970.

Confidence in Brown abounds in Cincinnati, where the citizenry remembers him as the near-genius, who, in his whole career, experienced but one losing season. In 1956, his team at Cleveland finished 5-7.

But the general consensus is that the new club, despite an encouraging start, will have its measure of sorrow, leading football types to speculate how Brown, a man of deep pride and vanity, will respond. Casey Stengel made the transition from the Yankees to the Mets, but Brown doesn't have Casey's gusto for comedy.

"Building a team from scratch is real intrigue," says Paul. "I've thought about a situation like this for years. I've been itching to take a shot at it."

There is no accounting for taste. Most men itch to play golf the rest of their lives in La Jolla.

THE SAGA OF HERB EDELMAN,
THWARTED VETERINARIAN,
EX-PEANUT SALESMAN AND FORMER HOTEL MANAGER

The cast and crew of The Good Guys aren't exactly slick Madison Avenue types. Several of the men who stand around looking helpful are bearded and beaded. Herb Edelman (who plays Bert, a diner owner) wears a striped T-shirt and rimless glasses; his publicity man wears a chestnut on a chain around his neck. After the day's work, the three of us lounge (variously decorated) on the deserted set. On one side of us is the diner where Bert and his wife make their honest living; on the other, tiers of bleachers—The Good Guys is filmed

By Carolyn See

before a live audience once a week.

"What it is," says Edelman, in his 30's somewhere, balding, sweet, tall, smiling, "is that Bert is a kind of a premature dropout. He comes back from, say, the Korean War. He looks around, he thinks, 'What's the point of going to college?' He marries a good woman he's known for years, and settles down with a little business. But that's not all. He keeps that other part of American life, the striving, the longing for success; but his innate decency keeps him from making it. He has his wife, his friend, his . . . bald head, he's funny, but he's real; that's what will make him worth looking at."

To all intents and purposes, The Good Guys is just another situation comedy. The traditional elements of the form are there; sight gags, corny jokes, complicated friendship, stereotyped marriage. Bert has a lot of trouble with his old childhood friend Rufus (Bob Denver), who drives a cab. Bert is also charmingly harried by his no-nonsense wife (Joyce Van Patten).

Bert and Rufus come from hum- → ble beginnings, but are incurable addicts of the American dream. They yearn to get rich quick, but the gimmick is that their innate goodness repeatedly keeps them from success. The Good Guys is a kind of poor man's "The Great Gatsby" told in reverse, and this is where it becomes (maybe) a little more than a half-hour of fun.

The under-30 crowd will laugh at the slapstick (the pilot film's best scene showed Bert and his cab-driving friend making chocolate malts in beautiful unison, a project which ends in predictable, pitiful disaster); but people over-30 should recognize themselves, the nobodies who started out so full of style and energy, and ended up nobodies after all. That most touching masculine age, when man's hopes and dreams clash painfully with what's really going to happen to him, is the backbone, the set of assumptions, which informs The Good Guys and will make it worth looking at—if people can stand to see at night what they've been going through all day.

Joyce Van Patten is perfect as the wife who's been bombarded by reality, a somehow former beauty, now attractive, but in color television tired around the eyes. Bert's friend has never married and looks 10 years younger than Bert and his wife; the complete works of Horatio Alger are written on his sweet vacant face. Bert is caught between the reality of his wife and the dreams of his friend. If the audience can deal with all that subliminal truth, then The Good Guys could be the Great American Situation Comedy.

Edelman's own disorganized youth suggests both the part he plays on The Good Guys and the whole vague allegory of the American dream.

"I went to so many schools," he says, "I couldn't seem to stay in. I started out at Cornell University to be a veterinarian, but my grades were awful, so I quit. Then I worked for a newspaper and went to school to be an announcer.

Then I went in the Army. Spent the time mostly in Okinawa. It was a gas, I was a radio operator, but when I came back I couldn't decide what to do—I was a devout pacifist by that time and I'd spent time in the Far East; it sort of determined my whole outlook on life from then on. Have you ever heard of a Jewish Buddhist? I came back to the United States and became a peanut salesman. I don't know, I couldn't decide. I quit that, went back to Brooklyn College, managed a crummy hotel for a year or so, met a comedian, started a team with him, went to Pittsburgh, made some money with the act, went to Brooklyn College again, was an advertising man, drove a cab, quit school, came West, couldn't stand it, decided I had to be an actor, then went East, got some summer stock parts—I was kind of wasted, you know? by all that life—then got into 'Barefoot in the Park' and 'The Odd Couple.' Then I came out West again, oh, I did 'Luv' on the road, then East again and then out here."

Edelman sounds like a man who could never make it, but he did. Here we all are, in fact. "I had a kind of ethnic hangup myself," he says. "You know, that whole idea about my-son-the-doctor? What pride parents have? That obligation children have to perform? Well, I was my-son-the-bum. A creative person doesn't have a chance, has no definition, in a hard-working urban Jewish family. They couldn't see me, or what I was. Now it amazes me that it's not really so much the character I act as what I am that somebody is buying. I'm myself, and somehow they want to see it. It's amazing." It's the American dream, all right. And Edelman, besides striking it suddenly—if speculatively—rich, has married the most beautiful girl.

"Yes, I'm married, to a beautiful girl," he says, and twice more in the conversation calls her beautiful. Edelman's wife, Louise Sorel, is an actress. →

Science Finds Way To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop The Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

A scientific research institute has discovered a medication with the ability, in most cases—to promptly stop burning itch and actually shrink hemorrhoids.

In one hemorrhoid case after another very striking improvement was reported by doctors who conducted the tests. Pain and itching were promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Tests conducted on hundreds of patients by doctors in New York City, in Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center proved this so. And it was all done without narcotics or stinging astringents of any kind.

The secret is Preparation H®. There is no other formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids like it! Preparation H also lubricates, soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. Preparation H comes in ointment or suppository form. No prescription is needed.

They have no children, live at the beach, collect pets, enjoy life.

Edelman seems almost as incredulous and pleased about his relationship to Bob Denver, which on the show is perfect, well-timed, relaxed. How long have they known each other? "Just since they cast the series. We met in an office, can you believe it? We talked, and we talked, we just carried on, we hit it off. Later on we asked each other, how did it happen? You know, when you meet somebody, you look lots of times like you're going to war. I mean, you've got all these things. But there's something about Denver; he's disarmed himself, so he disarms you. And we see the humor in everything, we're laughing all the time. It seems like we have the ability to enjoy almost everything." He looks apologetic; there's a line somewhere between the nice and the corny; he's afraid he's crossed it. "I guess it's the absurdity of everything we laugh at. I'm not really sure what's funny."

We talk vaguely for a while about the nature of comedy. "I used to play to lights," Edelman says. "You know, those lights on stage, above you, they glance off you, they seem to laugh, they're aware. It's a very sensual thing. In fact, humor is very sensual. I know a lot of people say humor is a way of blocking things out, but I think you're open when you laugh. That's why, if the show stays on for a while, I wouldn't mind disturbing people. I'd like to think we're at the beginning of an evolutionary process, where this show can become more serious. I don't mean less funny, but where the characters will be allowed to say something. People get panicked quite often when you just lay something on them, but they're not threatened by what makes them laugh."

"It's very nice on Fridays when the live audience comes in to see the show," the publicist says absently. "A curtain is drawn in front of the set, ushers give out programs, there's a real theater feeling . . ."

I ask Edelman, if the series succeeds and—unlike Bert—he makes good, how will he spend his money? "One of the best things you can do is buy freedom, just time to do something. Like learning to play a musical instrument—not buy the instrument, play it. And," he says, tentatively, "I'd like to get some records, or a good car. I'm enough of a materialist to like a nice piece of machinery."

"There's nothing wrong with that," the publicist remarks. They slouch down in their chairs, off in a conversation (already weeks long, from the feel of it) of their own. It tangentially concerns materialism but veers off on the wisdom of the East, the sayings of Krishnamurti, the proper response to American violence, the presence of God in our lives; in short, the proper way for man to live in this world. "We've got to be careful of our good intentions and of who we condemn," the publicist says, feeling his oats. "There's room for the materialist as well as the poor man. And even what we think of as evil may have meanings we are unable to understand."

Edelman answers something argumentative about the need to protest against an ugly world. "I just can't see that it's so simple."

"Everyone in the world is a groovy cat," the publicist insists.

Edelman thinks about that, answers. Behind their conversation, down a kind of figurative tunnel, is a better-than-average situation comedy which aspires to significance. All their loosely formulated beliefs, plus those of the writers, producers, what-have-you, have to be pushed into that tunnel, tamped down to a half-hour format. How it will turn out is anyone's guess.

"Krishnamurti would say even Hitler was a groovy cat because he was part of a bigger plan—something we don't know."

"Man," Edelman says, and crosses his feet on the table, ready for hours more, "you'll never get me to believe that."

THE DORIS DAY SHOW

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

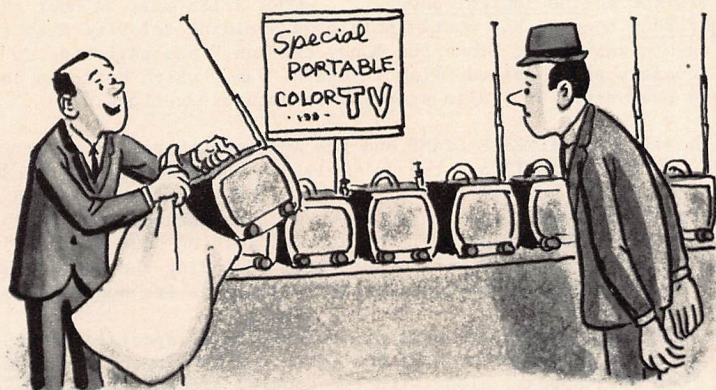

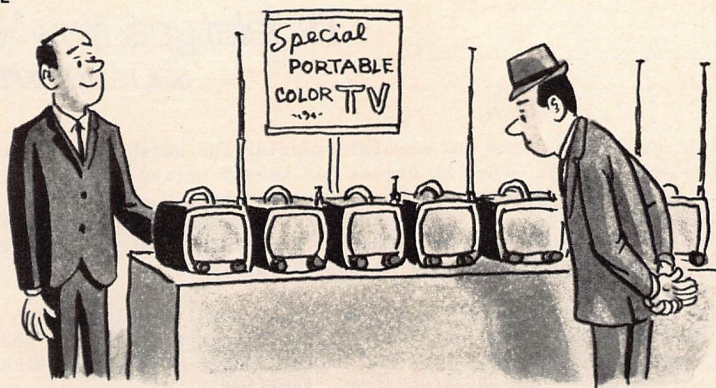

The opening title shots in this show are pure gold. Along with Miss Day's voice-over of "Que Sera, Sera," you have rays of sunshine, daisy fields, a pond, a butterfly, a pony, a sheep dog running, Miss Day herself, running with two children, etc., etc. Then, too, a close-up of Miss Day, with the sun shining on—no, it can't be—no, it isn't—it's on golden threads among the gold.

In this show, whatever will be, will be, all right, but it won't be good. And, before you get mad, let us say quickly that we are not going to criticize Miss Day. In fact we are going to defend her. She is natural, believable, a delightful singer, an excellent comedienne. True, she is photographed through so many filters that you feel she is not on TV but on your radio—but never mind. If she's too far away to think of as the girl next door, think of her as the girl next to the girl next door.

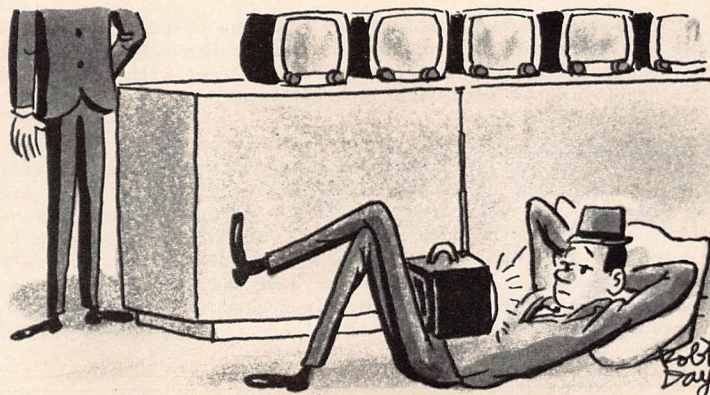

Unfortunately it is necessary to discuss—and now you can get mad—the rest of the show. In the first place, take the idea. And whatever you do, don't lose it, because the producers of this show sure did—if indeed they ever had one. Second place, take the characters. Start with Grandpa Buck (Denver Pyle). As his part is written, he is the second most irritating character on your screen this season. He would have edged out bossy housekeeper Aggie (Fran Ryan) for the gold medal if it were not for the fact that Aggie cheers all those who have ever tried to get, and keep, any kind of help. However impossible their help was, she was, compared to Aggie, Mary Poppins. Next we come to the two children. Again don't blame them. Presumably they don't write the lines, although we wouldn't bet on it. In any case, they are the greatest argument for grown-ups since the youth movement began. Last we come to Leroy B. Simpson (James Hampton), who would be fine in some other show, but in this one manages to combine all of the irritating features of everyone else. Even when he's not on, he's a threat—there is always the chance that he will appear.

There are plots in this series. We realize people will challenge this statement, but there are. However, they are buried under so many layers of cotton-candy writing, not to mention the thunderous laugh track, that they deserve better. Like, for example, interment, with attendant ritual, at Forest Lawn. One recent episode ran a few minutes short, but it didn't make any difference, because at the end Leroy came in to borrow a truck, Grandpa started to string up his old gourd-guitar and Doris and Aggie started to sing "Down by the Old Mill Stream." Not only is this show no more interesting than anyone's everyday life, it's a good deal less so. You can prove it. Tonight, instead of tuning in on the show, don't. Just sit around in your kitchen with your family and friends. Ask whether anyone would like a glass of milk. If someone says either yes or no—terrific. You've got your dialogue. You want action, too? All right, get up and butter some bread. Ask Grandpa if he wants some. He shakes his head. Ah, something's wrong. Wonderful, you've got a plot.

NEIL HICKEY REPORTS:

"This Is Tom Jones," the ABC special starring the Welsh pop singer, is set for next Jan. 9. When he begins his weekly series on Feb. 7, JONES will play host to performers from Europe and the U.S., as well as doing his own singing . . . "Don Quixote," a symphonic poem by RICHARD STRAUSS, will be the theme of LEONARD BERNSTEIN's first New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert on CBS Christmas Day.

IRWIN C. WATSON, this year's emergent young comic, has dates with ALAN KING (NBC Timex special, Jan. 14); The Hollywood Palace (ROWAN and MARTIN are the hosts; Feb. 15); and on the BOBBIE GENTRY-NOEL HARRISON special, called "A Spring Thing" (NBC, April 28). He's now also a regular visitor to The Tonight Show . . . WOODY ALLEN will be host on The Tonight Show Dec. 9, but mostly he's been avoiding television to finish editing his new movie, "Take the Money and Run," and polishing up his next Broadway play, called "Play It Again, Sam," which hits the boards in late February. He's also starring in both productions.

British film star TERENCE STAMP and the American character actor and comedian STEPIN FETCHIT are the unlikely duo who will be FLIP WILSON's guests on his NBC special called "The Flip Show," which is in the can awaiting an air date . . . If you're hung up on parades, CBS is the place for you Thanksgiving Day: the network's three-hour special "Thanks-giving Parade of Parades" will cover five, including the one in Charlotte, N.C., which will have singer TONY MARTIN as its honorary marshal.

ANDY GRIFFITH is taping his musical-variety-comedy special for CBS this month. But it won't go on until Feb. 20. DON KNOTTS and TENNESSEE ERNIE FORD will appear, along with two singing groups, the YOUNG SAINTS and the ESTABLISHMENT. DON KNOTTS, by the way, is currently making a movie for Universal called "The Love God."

STEVE ALLEN's friends and staffers say that the comedian's syndicated talkfest stands to pick up the lion's share of MERV GRIFFIN's stations when the latter joins CBS next fall to slug it out with JOHNNY CARSON and JOEY BISHOP in the late-night sweepstakes.

Shell's Wonderful World of Golf returns to NBC on Jan. 4 (5-6 P.M., ET), with a new format: instead of man-to-man matches in the various countries, there'll be an 18-man elimination tourney, with the winner getting $20,000. All told, the sponsor is--excuse the expression--shelling out $179,000 in purse money . . . The National Basketball Association All-Star Game, to be played in Baltimore, will be televised on ABC Jan. 14 . . . That network also will bring you the Coaches' All-America Team, featuring, in action, the outstanding college football players of 1968, as selected by the Coaches' Association. Air date: Dec. 6.

Be ruthless. Give us The Face Test.

1 Look closely at some faces on the screen.

The real test of color tv is how it shows faces. Are they too red? Too green? Philco's special color circuit (in every big-screen model) produces a wider range of flesh tones. It catches the subtle shades of color that make faces more lifelike.

2 Try the tint control.

Do the faces jump to violent red or green as soon as you touch the tint control? If so, you'll have a hard time adjusting that set. Philco's wider range of flesh colors gives you room to adjust skin tones more accurately.

3 Switch to another channel.

How easy is it to get good faces on another station? There's no such thing as a tuning device that gets you perfect pictures automatically. But our tuning system makes sure you get the proper signal on all channels. Even in fringe areas.

Philco gets the faces right. The rest is easy.
